MEMORANDUM FOR: Director of Central Intelligence

VIA: Deputy Director of Central Intelligence

FROM: Harry E. Fitzwater
Deputy Director for Administration

SUBJECT: Weekly Report for Period Ending 22 October 1982

1. Progress reports on tasks assigned by DCI/DDCI:

None.

2. Items/events of major interest:

a. On 21 October, the Deputy Director for Administration (DDA) presented the Agency's Outstanding Handicapped Federal Employee Award to [redacted] an employee assigned to the Printing & Photography Division, Office of Logistics.

b. The Technical Services Division, Office of Security, presented an extended three-hour briefing on the hostile audio threat and audio countermeasures to 48 students enrolled in NSA's National Senior Cryptologic Course.

d. Approximately 1,500 employees have attended the FBI's presentation on the hostile intelligence threat in the Washington area. (The presentations have been held in the auditorium.) Due to this overwhelming response, the Security Education Group, Office of Security, is scheduling additional sessions for 8 and 10 November.

i. On 16 October, the Language School's Chief of Testing gave the keynote address to the Tennessee Foreign Language Teachers Association at Nashville introducing the subject of oral proficiency testing to more than 280 college and high school teachers--the largest turnout ever for the Association.

j. The Smithsonian Institute Archives recently discovered several classified Agency documents in the files of one of its former Secretaries (chief operating officer). They asked for assistance from the National Archives and Records Service (NARS) and were subsequently referred to the Classification Review Division, Office of Information Services. The documents were "sandwiched" in the midst of correspondence between the Secretary and America's greatest authority on the louse that infects the Colombian parrot. This incident not only demonstrates the strange places where Agency documents may be found, but also the role that NARS plays in brokering requests of this nature.

3. Significant activities anticipated during the coming week:

a. The DDA, ADDA, and several other senior Directorate officers will visit with IBM officials in White Plains, New York, on 26 October.

b. The Office of Security will conduct an Industrial Security Seminar 28 and 29 October for approximately 30 individuals representing firms with whom we do business.
